Asia Should Pave
The Way
To World Peace

New Delhi, Sept. 23.

The Indonesian Premier, Dr Ali Sastroamijoyo, said at a banquet here tonight that Asia must utilise the shift in political preponderance from Europe to Asia "to pave the way for peace."

"It is in peace, and peace only, that the countries of Asia will be able to develop themselves in welfare states," he said.

Speaking at the same banquet, Mr Nehru, the Indian Premier, said peace was "an urgent necessity" for the people of Southeast Asia.

Mr Nehru said: "I doubt if there are any people in the world—I certainly do not think there is any country which does not desire peace—and yet unfortunately we get entangled in fears and suspicions of each other and so while desiring peace we sometimes walk away from peace or sometimes act in a manner which makes peace more difficult."

URGENT NECESSITY

"Peace is obviously necessary for all the world and I may say so, it is even more necessary, it is an urgent necessity and a passionate word for us people of Southeast Asia."

"After long periods of internal difficulties and conflicts in our struggle for freedom, we have reached a stage when, in large measures, we could fashion our own destiny and we are eager and anxious so passionately to achieve something to build our countries to do away with evils and poverty and misery that encompass so many people in our country and it is obvious that we cannot do so except in peace and through peace."

"If by our own folly or the folly of others, peace is broken, then all our problems of building up are also broken. Therefore we desire peace with passion," he concluded. —Reuter.

Reduce International
Tension To Avoid
Accidental WarTENSE & FEARFUL WORLD
SAYS LESTER PEARSON

New York, Sept. 23.

Mr Lester B. Pearson, Canadian External Affairs Minister, told the United Nations today that "greatest importance" should be attached to measures which could reduce international tensions in order to avoid the risk of "accidental war."

Speaking in the opening debate of world affairs in the General Assembly Mr Pearson said: "Quite apart from the danger of deliberate aggression, we must recognise that in a tense and fearful world, there is also the risk of accidental war brought about by miscalculation or a misreading or misapprehension on each side of the other's intentions."

"Whatever the rights and wrongs of a situation, such mistakes under modern conditions could be profoundly dangerous to the entire world."

"For these reasons the greatest importance should be attached to measures which can reduce international tensions, lower temperatures and remove the barriers whether they be psychological or physical to communication."

Mr Pearson said that mankind was only beginning to develop and use the institutions of interdependence of which the United Nations was by far the most important.

KEEP AT IT

"The work will not be completed in a day," he added. "But it will not be completed at all unless we keep everlastingly at the job of building of correcting those tendencies which have already made the work more difficult and which may, if we are not careful, stop it altogether."

Mr Pearson said that the Canadian delegation was confident that President Eisenhower's proposal to establish an international atomic energy agency would prove to be an "important step" in the liberalization of atomic energy from its military uses.

"International co-operation in the peaceful use of atomic energy cannot in itself remove the dangers of atomic energy," he added.

NUCLEAR SCIENCE

"Technological processes and developments in nuclear science have made mankind far more immediately interdependent than either public opinion or governments in any part of the world, have yet realised. As our interdependence increases, our divisions persist."

"The fact that, if we do not find a means to harmonise, to reconcile them, they may destroy us increases the importance of the United Nations as a centre of negotiation," Mr Pearson said.

"If we are to do anything about these visions, we must first recognise and understand them."

He said that thermonuclear devices were "too dangerous" the threat that they pose to the very existence of life on this planet is too great — for same men anywhere to view with equanimity their existence in a divided and frightened world. —Reuter.

Editors Told To Avoid Insulting
Foreign PowersTehran, Sept. 23.
A Government communiqué calling on Iranian newspaper editors to "avoid insulting the foreign powers" was published by the entire press here tonight.

The communiqué, signed by Gen. Fazlollah Zahedi, Iranian Premier, is thought to be the result of complaints made yesterday by the Soviet Ambassador, Anatoli Lavrenko, about press attacks against Russia recently made following the discovery of a Communist plot in the army and police. —France-Press.

Benelux Group
Presenting Common Front

Brussels, Sept. 23.

The Benelux group are expected to present a 'common front' at next week's nine-Power London conference on European security.

A source close to the Belgian Government said today that the Benelux Foreign Ministers, who are to meet in The Hague on Saturday, would be "examining the prospects of the London conference in order to co-ordinate their views before the talks."

Mr Paul Henri Spaak, Mr J. W. Beyen and M. Joseph Bech, Foreign Ministers of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg respectively, have so far been unanimous on the broad outlines of European security problems. They gave in agreement at last month's Brussels conference on the European Defence Community Treaty, which was called on their joint decision. They met again to agree on a joint policy before Mr Anthony Eden's recent visit here during his tour of West European capitals.

NOT DEFINED

But an official spokesman said here today that Belgium had not yet defined her attitude to such questions as whether an extension of the Brussels Pact and Germany's entry into the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation would have to be carried out simultaneously.

"The British and French proposals are now being studied by Foreign Ministry experts in an effort to find ways of reconciling them with both the North Atlantic and Brussels treaties," he said.

A Government source said later tonight that Belgium considered it "essential" that West Germany's entry into NATO should be carried out simultaneously with any enlargement of the Brussels Treaty.

Reports received here from The Hague have indicated that the Dutch Government holds the same view.

Mr Spaak, who is leading the Belgian delegation to London, will have with him seven advisers, including M. Andre de Staercke, Belgium's permanent representative at NATO. —Reuter.

AIR SEARCH
CALLED OFF

Ismailia, Egypt, Sept. 23.

The Royal Air Force today called off its search for a plane that the British freighter Nigarian reported had crashed in the Mediterranean shortly before dawn today.

An RAF spokesman said the Nigarian probably mistook a flame flare from another ship in the area for a ditched aeroplane. Authorities at Athens also concluded the report was unfounded after establishing that all aircraft departing from Athens before the crash was reported had arrived safely. —United Press.

Berlin, Sept. 23.

An East German Government delegation, headed by Dr Lothar Bode, the Foreign Minister, left today for Moscow, where the German news agency, ADN, said the East had been invited to the Chinese Government's 15th anniversary celebration of the founding of the People's Republic of China. —United Press.

THERE'S FAME AHEAD FOR ANY YOUNG
CRICKETER WHEN OLD-STAGERS SAY:

A YE, you's
a useful LAD!

DESMOND HACKETT takes a look at the "likely" lad who plays for Lancs... and picks him to top today's list of people who have Appointments with Fame...

ROBERT H. BARBER, the boy you see on the right, is an 18-year-old with a tangle of fair hair who looked as though he had just tossed his prep books into an untidy pile when he went out to bat for Lancashire at Old Trafford this year.

The grim jury of spectators stared in silent examination, suspicious of newcomers.

Those who sit on the rising tiers of hard wood seats, on the Manchester end of that unlovely ground, would be unmoved by a century if it was not performed with grace.

They would rub their chins and say, "Aye, he were useful."

So Robert H. Barber, the schoolboy from Rishin College, North Wales, was in the Star Chamber of cricket when he went out to bat. He scored only 13, but he performed, so correctly that the grand jury admitted "You's a useful lad."

Robert H. Barber had pencilled in an appointment with fame. In Lancashire they tell with deep relish the tale of Robert H. Barber and the professional master of cricket art, Cyril Washbrook, of Lancashire and England.

Washbrook, who can pick out talent as alertly as he picks out the loose ball when he is batting, took young Barber down to the nets for bowling tuition.

And the story goes that after half a dozen balls Barber suddenly slipped in a goosy which never gave Washbrook a chance.

Quite properly Washbrook murmured, "Not bad, boy," having no desire to give Barber ideas.

But a few minutes later, Barber coughed up that old goosy again, and once more Washbrook was wondering where "that one" had gone to. What he said then is not included in the story.

It would be difficult to inflate the ego of this boy, Barber. He is a quiet-spoken lad, almost shy.

He just considers himself the untalented pupil. When Lancashire were lined off at Portsmouth, and most people played cards, or lounged around, he asked Johnny Ikin, of England and Lancashire, to teach him how he followed through when he was batting.

That was because Barber, who bowls right-hand leg breaks and the rare goosy, bats left-handed—like Ikin.

Barber, who was given a cricket bat for his third birthday, was top of the class in cricket as a schoolboy. In one match for Rishin against Rydal he scored 188 not out in a total of 192 for six declared.

After which commendable exercise he took nine Rydal wickets for around four runs apiece.

Against Llandovery he took 14 wickets for 27 runs. In 14 matches for his school, Barber scored 1,000 runs.

But while he is accepted as a "good un" at forthright Old Trafford, Barber says in his quiet way, "I have so much to learn about this game, and cricket will have to take second place after October when I go up to Cambridge to study medicine."

He will not be missing his appointment with fame. But when he keeps it no one will be more politely surprised than Robert H. Barber.

And FAME lies in wait behind the TV screen...
Where it's no crime
if a girl is YOUNG
by CYRIL AYNLEY

UP at Lime Grove studios where the BBC produces its television there are three young people who, I predict, will go far.

Their names: Patricia Foy, Denis Vance, and Alvin Rakoff. Their profession: producers.

Why pick on producers? I believe that as viewers at home become more selective and less doped by television the producers will become more important and better known.

The hallmarks they put on their shows will cause viewers to say, "I see so-and-so has a play on tonight. That should be good."

Patricia Foy, 25-year-old girl from Frinton, is one of the youngest producers at Lime Grove. And she has just been given the job of taking over "Affairs for You," the popular, six-studio Eric Robinson show. That is another step towards her appointment with fame.

It is a big responsibility at 25 to sit in the control room in complete and solitary charge of a programme going out to several million critical viewers.

Big Responsibility

It is a big responsibility to be told you will produce a celebrity series of top artists like Yehudi Menuhin, Dame Myra Hess, Claudio Arrau, and Mosewitsch — which is what Patricia Foy is doing this autumn.

But Miss Foy thrives on responsibility. "I love every moment of it," she says. "In television they trust you completely."

Talk of marriage to her and she replies: "That's a bit complicated. If I get married, it would only be on condition that I carried on with my job."

And off she goes back to her office to dictate to her secretary, to work out what Madame X will want to wear in the next serial, musing over camera angles, noting that she can't dip into a major change to an old and experienced hand.

Denis Vance is quite different. Shy, nervous, and a bit of a recluse, he is a 25-year-old producer at Lime Grove. He is a big, dark, and a bit of a recluse, he is a 25-year-old producer at Lime Grove. He is a big, dark, and a bit of a recluse, he is a 25-year-old producer at Lime Grove.

Grove as a runaway, race-ahead young man with a lot to learn.

But he admits himself he has a lot to learn.

"Television itself is in the quaking, baby-in-arm stage," he says. "We all have a lot to learn."

On the other hand, a Lime Grove old-timer told me: "We taught him to be grateful to Denis Vance. His tremendous enthusiasm and his new ideas have done us all a lot of good."

Vance is mad keen on camera cuts. In his last production, the South Country play "Job for the Boy," he made 420 cuts in an hour and a quarter and the job was done so skilfully that no one realised it.

Again you find the same vital enthusiasm for TV. "It's an exciting, thrilling period. There's so much to do."

Much quieter than Denis Vance is young Alvin Rakoff, a Canadian.

Through the smoke of numerous cigarettes he muses: "The only trouble is the moment is that we're so busy we don't get time to think. This TV production wants thinking about."

"Many a time, when it has been too late, I've thought to myself, 'Oh why on earth didn't I do that.'"

Rakoff came from Canada, quite friendly, three years ago. But with a determination, clocked by his sister, he had vied his first TV script to the BBC within four days of arrival. It was a 15-minute talk for children.

Since then he has produced "The Emperor Jones," "Diana Wynyard in 'The Lovers'" and "The Goodbye Girl." He is now producing "The Goodbye Girl" and "The Goodbye Girl."

He recently refused a job at much better pay with an American broadcasting company. "The future," he says, "is in the TV. There are big developments ahead. The future is in the TV. There are big developments ahead. The future is in the TV. There are big developments ahead."

FIVE UNKNOWN MEN OF TODAY—BUT ONE OF THEM IS DESTINED TO RULY OVER ONE MILLION, THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND WORKERS, MEMBERS OF BRITAIN'S MIGHTIEST TRADE UNION

WHO WILL BE BOSS?

By Alan Johnson

IF you mentioned the names Jock Tiffin, William Tudor, Tom Hodgson, Frank Cousins, or Frank Coyle to anyone you met in the street today, you would get no reaction whatsoever, beyond a raised, querying eyebrow.

If you mentioned them to any of the eight million trade unionists represented at the meeting at Brighton you would not do much better. There would be a glimmer of interest from only a minority.

But try the same process in just over one year from now and watch the result. Four of the names may still mean nothing. But the fifth? The fifth will still be an instant, powerful chord with almost everyone you meet — and certainly with trade unionists and TUC delegates.

For twelve months hence one of this map hand of unknowns will have become the mightiest name in all the trade union world.

He will be the boss of the 1,500,000-strong Transport and General Workers' Union.

As the potentate over the vast empire built up by Mr Ernest Bevin, this man will wield enormous, far-reaching powers. Overnight he will have done a springboard leap from obscurity to the pinnacle of national prominence.

Overnight he will become respected, feared — by other trade union chiefs, handled by employers like the most fragile porcelain, and courted by politicians and Socialist Party top-brass with their eyes on the cash they need, and which his union can provide.

The event which is going to cause this breathtaking uplift of fortune for one lucky individual is the retirement of the present general secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union, Mr Arthur Deakin.

Mr Arthur Deakin, 55, next September. He has only one more Trade Union Congress to go.

If you doubt that it really is going to mean such a sweeping change for this successor, then examine the career of Deakin himself. Today he is the very figure of fame. But fourteen years ago his was the obscurity of Jock Tiffin and Co.

Then Ernest Bevin took the plunge into full-time politics and handed over his trade union empire to his ever-faithful lieutenant — Arthur Deakin. From that day on, Deakin's enthrone on the summit of public life was assured.

The 1951 general election selected Arthur Deakin by ballot for this job worth £1,650 a year, plus expenses. Now they must choose again. Will they plump for someone as solid, safe and right-wing as Deakin? You may be sure Deakin will be exerting every influence to make certain that the policies he has pursued for so long will be carried on by his successor.

Take a look at the candidates whose names will go into the lucky bag. Solid favourite in the field is energetic, pipe-smoking Mr

TWO OTHERS

Opposing him are two men who are sure of significant support. First comes Mr William Tudor, national secretary of the 80,000-strong Power Workers' Group of the union. If the favourite has the backing of Arthur Deakin, then Tudor has the priceless accolade of an even bigger name — no less than Ernest Bevin himself.

Tudor used to work on Mersey-side as a docker. So did his father. He might have been an MP. But Ernest Bevin disarmed Tudor from standing for Parliament and started him on the road which has led to him being one of the liveliest of younger trade union officials.

His politics? Safe and undeviating, Tudor at the age of 47 is not a man to bring cheer to Mr Arthur Bevin's heart.

Next, and in the same age-bracket, is Yorkshireman Mr Frank Cousins, once a policeman. Now his beat is looking after the Commercial Services section of the Transport and General Workers' Union, as national secretary. This caters for road haulage workers and Councils had a key part in settling the big London petrol strike last year.

Like some other capable union officials, he is suspected of leftish leanings. So I shall be much surprised if on Arthur Deakin's card there appears a tick against the name of Cousins. That of course may be Mr Cousins' advantage. Not all the TGWU rank and file love Arthur Deakin.

BEVIN'S EMPIRE

What about the rest? Mr Tom Hodgson, quiet, stout, north countryman, spent his early life in the milling industry. Fifty-six, he is national secretary of the General Workers' group of the union. Hodgson will have his supporters.

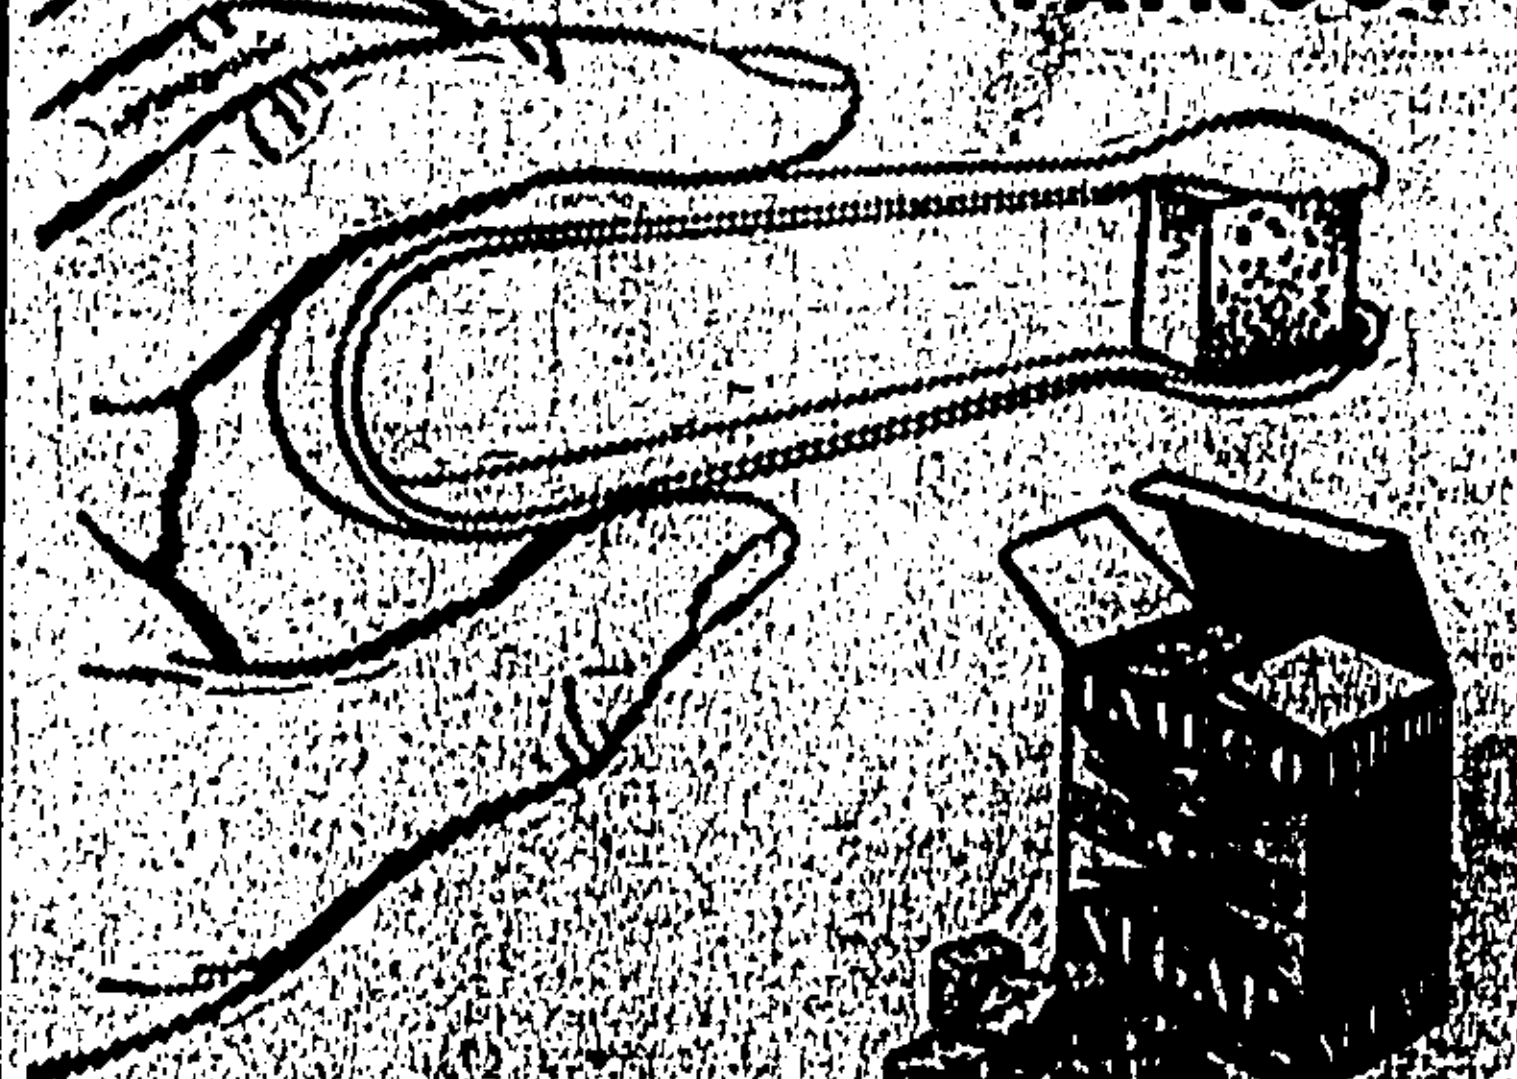

There is another ex-policeman, Mr Frank Coyle. He is national officer of the Passenger Services group, deals with busmen's business, and brings the hand of a trusty Socialist to bear as an experienced negotiator. Coyle is the outsider of the five.

One of these men will take over the coveted seat at Transport House beneath the portrait of Ernest Bevin — that is, providing there is no additional surprise candidate between now and the closing of nominations next month.

Whoever it is faces a tough fight. Bevin's empire needs a strong man to hold together the twining threads — which reach out to workers in hundreds of industries from bus-driving to energetic pipe-smoking Mr grave-digging.

EARLY SEASON LEAGUE LEADERS SELDOM WIN THE CHAMPIONSHIP

By TOM FINNEY

When we arrived back in Preston on a Tuesday from London after our 1-0 victory over Chelsea the previous night, there were calls of "Well done!" from porters and others on the station platform and, in fact, there were congratulations all round. Preston North End, for the second time this season, were on top of the First Division table.

My brother Joe, who is my partner in the plumbing and electrical engineering business, offered a hearty "Good show, Tom" when I arrived at the shop. Joe is a great North End supporter and was once on Blackburn Rovers' books as a player. But he added these well-worn words of caution: "It's easy to get to the top, not so easy to stay there."

And that's the point I want to make. At home that same night, I pulled out my bundle of facts and figures to see from the lessons of Soccer history, what chance we had of winning the Championship on the strength of being top of the table after just six matches. I went back five seasons and this was what I found in the First Division:

Top after 6 matches	End of Season	Champions	After 6 matches
1949-50 Wolves	2nd	Portsmouth	8th
1950-51 Arsenal	2nd	Spurs	9th
1951-52 Bolton	5th	Man. Utd.	3rd
1952-53 Liverpool	17th	Arsenal	8th
1953-54 West Brom.	2nd	Wolves	4th

Top after 6 matches	End of Season	Champions	After 6 matches
1949-50 Spurs	1st	Spurs	1st
1950-51 Birmingham	4th	Preston	17th
1951-52 Sheffield Utd.	11th	Sheff. Wed.	14th
1952-53 Huddersfield	2nd	Sheff. Utd.	11th
1953-54 Doncaster	12th	Leicester	7th

And now a look at a similar table for the Second Division:

Top after 6 matches	End of Season	Champions	After 6 matches
1949-50 Spurs	1st	Spurs	1st
1950-51 Birmingham	4th	Preston	17th
1951-52 Sheffield Utd.	11th	Sheff. Wed.	14th
1952-53 Huddersfield	2nd	Sheff. Utd.	11th
1953-54 Doncaster	12th	Leicester	7th

If we take serious notice of those figures, only Spurs give much encouragement to the idea that this season Preston can win the League Championship for the first time since the days of the great invincibles in 1889-90.

GOOD LUCK NEEDED

But you will see that, in most cases, the team that made a good start had a good season and everyone in Soccer knows that winning the championship, even more than winning the Cup, depends a lot on good fortune.

Injuries, the quality of a team's reserves, the weather and hundred lesser things have a tremendous influence on success and failure.

We missed the Championship in 1952-53 on goal average and, when it was all over, our minds turned back to all the different sets of circumstances that, at one time or another, had contrived to lose us just one point or one goal from a point or a goal that would have put us ahead of Arsenal.

My old friend, Charlie Buchanan, said after we had beaten Chelsea "You boys played good football, Tom—you should go a long way this season." But some people are already saying "Wait till the mud begins to squelch in your boots in November—then we shall see how far this on-the-ground Soccer gets you."

Nevertheless, if Preston can't win the Championship by playing the brand of Soccer that is a long tradition with the club, there will be no complaints at Deepdale. We shall not begin to kick the ball hard and often just because there is mud underneath.

FEAR OF DEFEAT

Our League is the hardest Soccer competition in the world. Even if luck is with you in regard to injuries, and the reserves when they are brought in come off, there is always a great mental strain as the season wears away. A successful team, with a row of victories behind it, finds the confidence built up from a row of South-ampton broke that run with a 3-3 draw at The Dell but it gave us the point we wanted for promotion.

I'm afraid most of my notes here have been about Preston. But they may give you some idea of the thoughts that run through the mind of a skipper when his team gets to the top of the table. Even if it is only a five-minute wonder!

COACHING HINT

Try to keep on the alert at all times during the game, even if play is going on outside your own territory for some time. Use any respite to sum up how the game has been going and how to exploit the flaws, if any, in the opposing team.

Baseball Umpire's Decision Upheld By HKSA

A protest against the umpire's decision in awarding a run to the Braves in the second inning of their play-off against the Pandas for the Baseball League pennant for 1954 was rejected by the Council of the Hongkong and Shanghai Association of Baseball Players.

The meeting voted three to two in upholding the umpire's decision. The umpire was Mr. F. A. Evans.

The game was played on September 12 and was called off in the first half of the ninth inning, due to darkness, with the score 2-2 in favour of the Pandas.

Yokio was called after long discussions by the Council and representatives of the two teams. The meeting was presided over by Mr. H. W. Winkler, assisted by Mr. A. H. O'Neill, Hon. Secy.

The Council of the Hongkong and Shanghai Association of Baseball Players met on September 13 to discuss the decision of the umpire.

SOCCER ON THE INSIDE

(Edited By Terence Elliott and Sam Leitch)

Willie Woodburn, Glasgow Rangers centre-half, 24 times a Scottish international, received his sentence last week.... banned from soccer for life.

Story behind this dramatic exit features 19-year-old Alex Paterson of Stirling Albion, the boy whose football idol was Willie Woodburn.

Paterson faced Woodburn in his first League match. Seconds from time came an incident. Woodburn was charged with striking young Paterson. And found guilty by the Scottish FA.

Said 34-year-old Woodburn: "I'm facing the fourth and final suspension of my career. This is a shameful way to go out of football. I will appeal."

Referee R. H. Young's evidence "Paterson, lying on the ground, struck Woodburn's leg. As he rose, Woodburn struck him with his fist."

£20,000 FOR

Nine thousand pounds. Enough to change the outlook of many club today; enough to buy that oh so much needed inside forward, wing half or goalkeeper.

Nine thousand pounds. Arsenal paid that the other day. Not for an inside forward, wing half or goalkeeper. Just to paint the Highbury stands.

West Ham's reserve outside-right Ken Tucker broke a bone in his right hand during a match last week... the sixth break on this hand in two years.

Manager Alec Stock of Leyton Orient has received an offer from Newport for Welsh international Billy Rios.

Out for two months, Ipswich inside-left John Elsworthy. The 31-year-old forward has a serious knee injury.

Biggest Soccer laugh of the moment concerns the Midlands Club Chairman who decided he, and not his manager, would carry through a five-figure transfer deal with a neighbouring club.

The selling manager resented his counterpart being side-stepped. He decided to raise the price by £2,000... and got it.

Which proves that business brains don't always count.

FRIGHTENED OFF

Brian Leach, Reading wing half still on strike after refusing £14-a-week League team terms, has left for Burnley.

This 21-year-old, priced at £2,000 by Reading, will have a trial before his Z training.

That he will return to the First Division side for a further trial.

"I'll be more than happy to join them if they are pleased with me," said Leach.

But an £8,000 buying price for another wing half has frightened Reading off. If Leach goes, they wanted Tommy Burden of Leeds as a replacement.

When Leeds manager Reich Carter quoted an £8,000 fee, however, Reading said "No deal."

World Cup referee Mervyn Griffiths has been invited by the Germans to referee their international clash with France at Hannover on October 16.

He was a linesman for the Germany-Hungary World Cup final.

Lessons Of The World Cup

Hungary Believes Her Team Formidable

By RITCHIE McEWEN

Though Hungary's failure to capture the World Cup has been a bitter disappointment, there is no question of any drastic changes in Hungarian football management or tactics.

The "surprise" defeat at the hands of Western Germany has been written off as just "one of those things," and the disaster put down to the "mental and physical exhaustion" of the keyed up players.

Recently a "sensational" rumour that Gustav Sebes, Hungary's Vice-Minister for Sport and architect of the "new democratic football" was to resign brought swift reaction.

Declared the Sports Commissar: "I have every intention of leading our national team for many years to come. As no team, however good, can be guaranteed against an occasional defeat, I cannot, of course, assure our fans a continuous stream of resounding victories."

"In the forthcoming international against Rumania, however, I am going to try out a few new players, but this will in no way alter our highly successful style and aggressive, goal-getting tactics, which have proved time and time again to be so overwhelmingly superior."

Hungarian sports commentators claim that Hungary has now built up an "almost unlimited" reservoir of first class young players, any one of whom might merit a place on the "A" and "B" national teams.

This season, it is prophesied, the Hungarians will be more formidable than ever.

With so few first class opponents, the Hungarian side of the football (the Soviet Union is the only nation not regarded as "second class" by Hungarian sports writers) more attention is to be paid to increasing the number of international matches with leading West European teams.

Apart from the bi-yearly games with their traditional rivals, their Austrian neighbours (usually very close games, providing the highlights of both the Hungarian and Austrian football year) the Magyars are looking forward to an early "revenge" against Western Germany.

AUSTRIAN PLANS

Although Austria gained a respectable and well deserved third place in the World Cup Games, there are certainly no signs of complacency among those responsible for the future fortunes of Austrian football.

Earlier this month, managers and trainers from all clubs in the "A" and "B" Leagues held an extraordinary meeting to hear Walter Nausch, veteran star international and Austria's "Old Man Football," unfold his far-reaching plans to rejuvenate Austrian football.

He began by listing the "undeniable deficiencies" shown up by the World Cup Games. Austria's top-line players, he charged, are:

1. Far too slow.

2. Lack proper training and skill in heading and jumping for the ball.

3. Obsessed with "toying with the ball" instead of using every possible chance to go all out for a goal.

4. Incapable of exploiting sudden opportunities inside the goal area.

Liberation Shield Match on Sunday

The final match of the Liberation Shield Series between Kowloon Bowling Green and Kowloon Cricket Club will be played on Sunday, October 17, at 3 p.m. Members of these Clubs who wish to participate are requested to sign-up as soon as possible.

THE CAMBOLS

AND THE CZECHS

Insufficient "ideological training" in the changing rooms is blamed for the poor showing of the Czech football team at the World Cup Games.

The full weight of "official displeasure" at the discomfiture of the Czech team in Switzerland has been placed squarely on the shoulders of the unfortunate "honorary officials" who are now attached to all Czech soccer clubs to instruct players and club officials alike in "ideology" twice a week throughout the year and every day during the season.

Since March 1948, when the Government drove the People's Football was reorganised on the Soviet model, these "Party ideologists" have had a large share in the control of the clubs.

Mr Teddy Waltham Sees Bright Future For Thai Boxers

London, Sept. 23. Mr Teddy Waltham, Secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, returned to London by air today from Bangkok where he viewed the world bantamweight title fight last Sunday.

He said that Thailand was eager to get British boxers to fight there but they would have to be men of the smaller weights. "The bigger boxer I saw," would be around the welterweight class," he said.

Mr Waltham predicted a bright future for Thai boxers provided they could get more fights—faster.

England Unbeaten In Home International Golf Tournament

Portsmouth, North Wales, Sept. 23. The powerful English team continued to dominate the home international golf series at Royal Portcawl today.

With a well-earned victory over Scotland, the holders, by eight games to five with two ties, England, are now the only unbeaten country in the competition and are well placed to win the Championship for the first time since 1949.

They won the fourtimes 4-1 and the singles were shared, each country winning four games with two all squares.

In the final encounter tomorrow, England will meet Ireland, who were unexpectedly defeated today by Wales by six strokes in five holes, ending all squares.

Wales won the fourtimes by three to one with one halved, and Ireland took the singles four to three, with three halved.

Leningrad Beggars Can Afford To Keep A Mistress

Moscow, Sept. 23.

Beggars in Leningrad often earn enough to hire a dacha (country house) and keep a mistress, or even to buy their own house and garden, according to the newspaper "Leningrad Pravda."

Coming into Leningrad from as far away as districts bordering on Latvia, many of these beggars may be seen in trams, local trains and on the streets pretending to be war-wounded and "bravely swindling gullible people."

A typical example is Alexei Fedyaev, a vagabond who, in the guise of a veteran blinded during the war, earned over 100 roubles a day by begging. Soon he had saved enough to hire a dacha in a picturesque district near the sea and took a mistress "a healthy 35-year-old woman" who also did no work.

Or, the newspaper said, there is Matrena Grudova, who lived near Pskov and "has recently gathered together 10,000 roubles. "When I reach 15,000, I shall buy a house," Matrena Grudova tells her friends. Another inveterate beggar is P. Zhukov, "who has his own house, garden, goats and chickens, and regularly travels from Pavlovsk into Leningrad for his earnings."

V. Pavlovsk, until recently an accountant, boasts, "I earn 300 roubles in two days - why should I work? Where else could I earn up to 150 roubles a day?"

Declaring that beggars are "People who have lost their conscience, honor and human dignity, and who disgrace Soviet society," Leningrad Pravda declared that there is no longer any reason for begging in the

MUSIC CAN CALM THE PATIENT WHO IS ANXIOUS

Music is helping to save life and to restore health.

It is today serving doctors in many fields.

Because of its strong impact on the emotions, it is natural that psychiatrists should make much use of it. Many of them find that the right kind of music calms the patient who is anxious.

If a patient is depressed, soothing music in a minor key is likely to capture his mood. Music with a rapid tempo may suit the patient who thinks and talks quickly. Not only can the psychiatrist select music to suit the emotional development of the patient as the treatment advances, but he can also employ melody to establish mood essential to other forms of treatment.

During the second world war, thanks to the development of amazing new drugs and surgical and medical techniques, doctors were able to perform miracles in saving lives - and in healing wounds. But it was noticed that to combat an injury was often insufficient to restore full physical and mental health.

Something else was needed - and music was successfully used to relieve the tension of front-line fighters and to enable them to readjust themselves to normal life.

AN ELUSIVE THEME

Music weaves in and out of medical history like an elusive theme in a symphony. The doctor-priests of ancient Egypt used musical incantations. The witch doctors of primitive peoples incorporate special melodic chants as part of their 'treatment'.

David's harp soothed the melody of King Saul, and Homer declares that music saved Ulysses from a deadly hemorrhage. The characteristic melodies and tempo of the Italian dance, the tarantella, date back to the 18th century, when many European countries were swept by a form of mass hysteria called 'the dancing mania'.

The uncontrolled cowering and hopping which marked this affliction were said to be caused by the bite of a tarantula spider. According to some historians, the music of the tarantella originated in attempts to cure the madness by the physical exhaustion of dancing.

BRAIN OPERATION

One of the most important, although controversial, surgical developments of the last decade is the brain operation called leucotomy. This consists of severing certain fibres in the front of the brain, and after weeks of rest in a mental hospital, many patients are 'with-drawn, indifferent and unambitious persons', according to Dr. Hans H. Reese, a prominent American surgeon.

"But," he adds, "we have turned to music. On hearing certain recordings the patients' faces brighten. They begin tapping with their fingers, humming, and even getting up and dancing. Music becomes a socialising factor."

Many mental hospitals use soothing music to allay the fear and anxiety of patients before shock treatment. Some experts believe it is far more effective in this respect than the warm baths which are also used for this purpose.

ANAESTHESIA ADJUNCT

In surgery, some hospitals use music as an adjunct to anaesthesia, to lessen apprehension and to overcome the disturbing effect of noises and conversations in the operating theatre. Recent experiments at Chicago University showed that children in the theatre, soothed by light, amusing compositions, such as Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf," and adult patients seem to prefer popular love songs.

The technique sometimes has its humorous aspects. At a British hospital recently, a patient came out of his anaesthetic to hear the majestic strains of the "Te Deum." It took several minutes for doctors and nurses to calm him and to explain that the music came from an amplifier, and not, as he thought at first, from a heavenly choir welcoming him to paradise.

Music is now sometimes employed in obstetrics, since it helps to raise the mother's ability to stand pain and to while away the hours of her confinement.

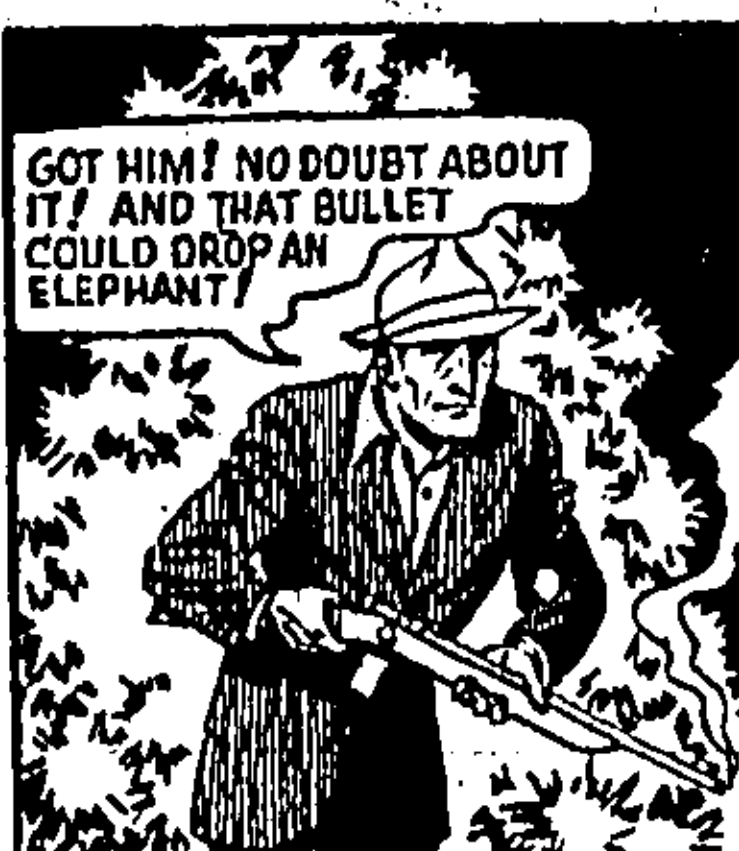

DENTAL MUSIC

Some time ago, an American dentist patented an invention consisting of two midget loud-speakers built into the head rest of the dental chair. He found that music coming from these enabled patients to overcome their fear of his dental instruments and helped to drown the disturbing whirrings of the drill.

On the more purely physical side, playing an instrument or dancing has proved of great value in a variety of conditions. Stiff limbs, needing remedial exercises, can be loosened up by the movements involved. Playing the piano provides exercise for the relaxation and contraction of hand and arm muscles which have been weakened by inactivity or temporary paralysis. Piano-playing also improves the articulation of joints impeded by bones or disease. Legs weakened by long stays in bed can be strengthened by dancing.

The 'Rumbling Rhino' Gets To Work

The latest development in the wheel is incorporated in the new "Rumbling Rhino", built by the Harmon-Herrington Company of Indianapolis, USA. The five-ton "Rhino" charges like no other vehicle through thick river bottom ooze, rolling without strain. Its water-tight body combined with the driving force of the Hemispherical wheels permits easy passage over such terrain, or through swamps, sand or on highways, where it can travel at 45 m.p.h. It is powered by a 120 hp Ford engine. When the Rhino enters deep water the driver shifts to a Hydrojet unit for propulsion and steering. It is anticipated that the "Rhino" will replace all existing military and civil vehicles in the Tank and Trailer division. — Express Photo.

Greek Police Smash Communist Cells In National Roundup

Athens, Sept. 23.

In a nationwide roundup, described by Field Marshal Alexander Papagos, Greece's Prime Minister, as the "biggest anti-Communist victory since the end of guerilla warfare in 1949," the Greek police have once more thwarted attempts to create an underground Communist party in this country.

Eighty-eight Communists, including 19 women, who constituted the illegal party machinery in Athens, Piraeus, Patras, Salonica and Thessaly have been arrested during the last six months by the Greek police.

Many of them were "small fry," induced by tiny allowances to collaborate in the Communist underground movement, but they also included six Moscow-trained top-ranking Communist leaders whose capture the police consider as a really big "catch".

Most important of all was the arrest of 34-year-old Charilaos Florakis, alias Captain Yiannis, who is described by the police as "Chief of echelon" of the Communist Party Politbureau in Greece.

Florakis, who during World War II was a Major-General of Communist partisans, managed, after the Communist guerilla war in 1949, to escape across the border into a neighbouring Iron Curtain country.

Before being sent to Greece to reorganise the illegal party machinery, he received a year's special training at the Military Political Academy in Moscow.

The other five top-ranking Communists arrested had received training in espionage and underground work at similar schools in Poland and Czechoslovakia. Their course included, in addition to high level indoctrination in Communist ideas, instruction on how to set up and use wireless sets, ciphering, secret ways of writing, micro-photography, the art of disguising, printing, sabotage and all that was required to turn them into fully fledged secret agents.

They were then taken to Bulgaria and escorted by Bulgarian army officers, they arrived at the Greek border, whence they infiltrated into the country.

The Greek Communist party, ever since it was banned in 1947 and defeated on the battlefield in Northern Greece in 1949, has spared no effort or money to rebuild its underground party machinery.

Its first effort was smothered by the Greek police and Greek Army Intelligence, in 1951, when they discovered a large communist-led "spy network" operating in Athens.

Helped by United States 6th Task Fleet aircraft, Greek Army Intelligence men were able to pinpoint the position of two wireless operating centres in the suburbs of Athens, which were transmitting military intelligence to a centre situated in satellite Rumania.

Beloyannis, who to the last day of his trial upheld Communist axioms while smugly smiling a red carnation, and two others, died before an execution squad.

A few months later, the police caught up with the 52-year-old tubercular party boss, Nicholas Plumbides, who had evaded capture for over 10 years.

According to police estimates, some 20,000 gold sovereigns and many thousands of dollars have been imported into the country since 1950 to finance the Beloyannis spy ring.

In spite of the death toll among its top leaders and the enormous expenditure involved, the Greek Communist party leadership, which is reported to have its headquarters in Bucharest, capital of neighbouring Rumania, has continued to infiltrate Communist agents into the country in an all-out effort to build up the party machinery again.

Since April 1954, Communist radio broadcasts from the other side of the Iron Curtain have been telling the world that "they" had completed the first phase of the re-establishment of the underground Communist organisation in Greece.

The aim of these broadcasts, according to the Under-Secretary of Public Security, General Vrachnos, was twofold:

1. To bolster the morale of cadres, members and fellow travellers in Greece; and
2. To show positive results to the Communist leaders' bosses in Moscow, who had to provide huge sums of money and other means to assist the Greek Communist party to operate underground.

Police and Intelligence services did not ignore these Communist "bombs". All channels were kept under close watch, and all fronts and backwaters, all wire supports, especially long-wave broadcasts, were kept under constant surveillance as well as the country's own security forces and Communist agents.

The result of these efforts was, in the words of Field Marshal Papagos, "the complete disintegration of the underground organisations which the Communists had succeeded in setting up and the discovery of the intelligence network of international and Greek Communism which operated against Greece, her allies and her North Atlantic Treaty allies."

During their investigations, the police discovered, in numerous hideouts such as basements, cellars, specially built underground crypts and derelict buildings, secret printing presses, radio machines, radio sets, double deck suit-cases, large sums of money in foreign currency and other special equipment useful to spies.

Party archives seized in crypts led to the arrest of more members and financial collaborators.

Secret codes used for transmission of information by wireless to party leaders abroad, have been handed over to special Army Intelligence units for deciphering.

Most of those employed in the underground were according to the police, former Communist partisans, released prisoners and exiles, and even Communists who had declared that they had given up Communism. Many of them were people who were recently released from custody by the Government under the implementation of its "forget the past" policy.

Warning all such people Field Marshal Papagos said:

"The Government declares that it is able to arrest and will impose exemplary punishment on all those who, benefited from the lenient measures adopted, have started again to work against the State."

The Athens daily newspaper "Avgi", organ of the Communist propaganda Party "Democratic Union", commenting "oh, the arrests, wrote:

"The whole matter (of the arrests) is opposed to the feelings of the Greek people, who indignantly ask 'for what and quiet'.

"The Government must take the measures to eradicate the 'forget the past' policy, which has been the cause of the resurgence of the underground Communist party in Greece," the Athens daily said.

Cements Take The Limelight

By A Special Correspondent

The rise in Green Island Cements was perhaps the most exciting feature in an otherwise quiet but very steady market this week.

They fell slightly yesterday from their high of $29.80—and, incidentally, their highest point for many years—but brokers expect better things of them in the near future.

As far as I know the reason for the rise is based on these reports:

that there is to be a new or bonus issue soon; that the company's earnings for the first seven months were excellent; that they are selling all the cement they can turn out; that with the building of the Tai Lam Chung dam and the new Kai Tak airport their prospects seem assured for some time.

Cements have now risen $3.40 in a fortnight and almost $2 in the last week.

Yau-mat moved up this week from $154 to $161 before easing back to $157 buyers yesterday. Their dividend announcement is due very shortly now. The new or bonus issue announcement may not be made at the same time but the market knows it is inevitable and they're not awfully worried by the news that it may be delayed a couple of months.

The interest in the market this week has chiefly centred around these shares with news of better earnings, pending dividends, new issues or land sales. Otherwise the market has been dormant. Turnovers were moderate this week. The money position is reported to be fairly easy at the moment but there is no great demand for shares and there are certainly no anxious sellers.

GAS COMPANY NEWS

Provident show a small rise on the week—up 50 cents to $14.00 on the news that a good offer for shares of a West Point property of theirs. There is still some optimism about Hotels—enough to keep the shares at a buoyant $10.50 to $10.80.

Dairy Farms have done rather well on the week. Last Thursday they sold at $25. The next day they went ex dividend but earlier this week they almost made up for it by touching $24.80. Yesterday they were $24.75.

Allied showed a rise of from $4.05 buyers to $4.223 sale on the week. I heard yesterday that negotiations between the syndicate and the Hongkong Gas Company have been completed in London and there has been agreement on the terms of the sale of the shares. Shareholders here should be receiving a circular about the proposals shortly. In London, the Gas shares have been up to 40/- recently.

RUBBERS LIVELY

Amalgamated Rubber was a more lively issue this week when the shares rose to 90 cents on the strength of reports from Singapore that raw material prices were up. Banks and Unions have been very firm this week. I hear from brokers that Bank scrip is fairly hard to get at the moment.

There has been a slight rise of 1 cent in Resulta but otherwise Land issues have been quietly steady. A few people have been asking recently whether the Wheelock's dividend will be announced earlier this year. The company expect it will be the usual time—looking back at the reports over the last five years, I see that with the exception of 1952, an "average" date would be about mid-November with the meeting early in December.

New York Sugar Market

New York Sept. 23.
World No. 4 sugar futures closed today unchanged to 2 points higher with sales of 74 contracts.

Domestic No. 6 sugar futures closed 1 point lower to 1 point higher with sales of 188 contracts.

World futures ruled steady to firm in line with the raw market. Dealers believed Cuba has almost exhausted its quota of world sugar for this year, leaving special cut-side sugar as the next source of supply for world buyers.
